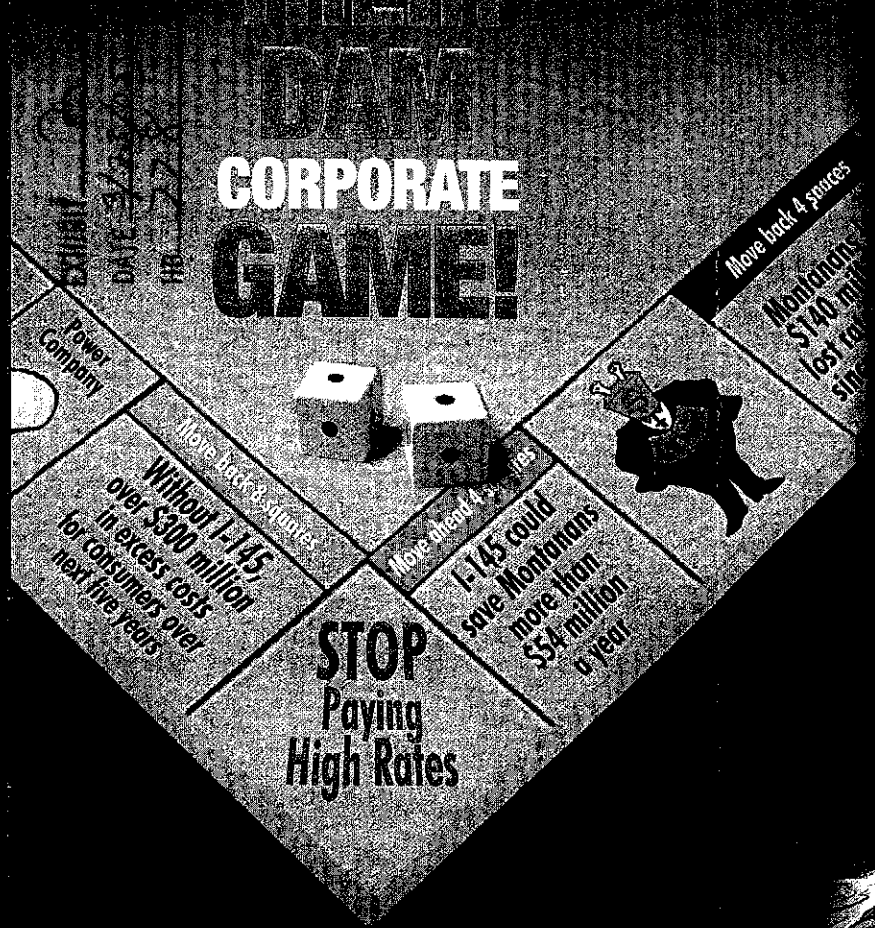
DON'T PLAY THEIR DAM CORPORATE GAME!



What about the water rights and lands that were sold with the dams?

The rights to use much of Montana's water and many of its riverside lands are now controlled by big out-of-state energy companies. They have no obligation to residents of this state.

I-145 will put those water rights and lands back in the hands of Montanans.

After determining which dams are the best deal for consumers, the Public Power Commission is authorized to request up to $500 million in revenue bonds to buy the dams at fair market value. These bonds would be paid back through the sale of electricity.

Taxes will not be raised to buy the dams.

I-145 will create an elected Public Power Commission to study whether we should buy any of the dams. If the Commission decides it is in the best interest of Montanans to buy the dams, Montanans would again be in control of their power rates and water rights.
