Sonja and Members of ETIC,

I was partially frustrated during our prior ETIC meeting. We asked interested parties questions related to net metering, and then had the Public Service Commission evaluate these answers. What we did not ask for was the Public Service Commission to do its own investigative and fact finding study. I believe we may have missed the mark on this because the PSC is one of the few, independent groups, that have the resources to do the research without having any skin in the game with the outcome. The PSC is able to do the research independent of the legislature and the results of the study may be beneficial once the 2017 session convenes.

I am asking that we give the nod to the Public Service Commission to open a docket for net metering, especially focused on rates, design and compensation when regarding cost shifts. Even if an agreement is reached between the interested parties, I believe this data may be crucial to ensure the rate payers aren't forgotten in our quest to find a solution.

Thank you.

Daniel
