RE: Senate Bill No 143 "An Act Revising Bison Management Laws, etc."

Chairman Randall and Committee Members:

The Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes (CSKT or Tribes) strongly oppose the passage of SB 143, a bill that would significantly alter the status and management of Yellowstone Bison in Montana. Passage of SB 143 would virtually remove the wild bison from their migratory homelands in Montana and would end a multi-government effort to return wild bison to their rightful place in the Montana ecosystem.

It is an understatement to say that the bison, or buffalo, has played a profound role in our history, as it has for all Montana tribes. The buffalo remains a key component of our culture today, and preserves a connection to tribal traditions that date back uncounted generations.

Our interest in this bill stems from the CSKT's unique status. When we signed the Hellgate Treaty in 1855 (12 Stat. 975) the Tribes reserved the right to hunt and fish in the usual and accustomed places – a right that includes hunting buffalo in the Greater Yellowstone Area. Our tribal members have a long history of hunting the buffalo, and we continue to rely on their meat, hides, and other parts to sustain us physically and spiritually. Passage of SB 143 would significantly hinder our ability to keep the buffalo as part of our diet and culture, and destroy our hope of seeing the last remaining wild buffalo herd play a role in the lives of CSKT tribal members for generations yet to come.

The CSKT oppose this bill as an overreaction to the perceived threat that wild bison pose in Montana. Essentially, SB 143 would implement a zero tolerance policy for wild bison in Montana, requiring that the Department of Livestock immediately slaughter, haze, or otherwise remove all bison that migrate into Montana from Yellowstone National Park. Further, SB 143 authorizes individual landowners to indiscriminately dispatch bison that enter their property, and as amended, replaces the current fair-chase hunt regulations with an extended hunting season. The passage of SB 143 would also ban the translocation of disease free Yellowstone bison to other Montana landscapes, including tribal lands on Montana Indian Reservations. As proposed, SB 143 is a harsh remedy for a problem that is currently being managed. Bison and cattle can, and do, coexist in Montana under the current laws and regulations. Implementing the overbroad measures of SB 143 would most certainly create an adversarial atmosphere between the Tribes and Montana.

Should SB 143 be enacted into law, it would end the intergovernmental partnership that has developed between the Tribes and Montana, and would very likely result in lengthy and expensive litigation over the future of bison in Montana. We value the relationship that has been forged between the treaty-hunt tribes and the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks. Our bison management goals have been based on a mutual commitment to a biologically sustainable hunt and a desire to see bison respected as a valued game species. We participate in yearly tribal-state intergovernmental hunt manager meetings focused on coordinating bison harvest, hunter safety, regulatory enforcement, and the long term viability of the herd. The CSKT are also a full partner in the Interagency Bison Management Plan (IBMP). While acknowledging its limitations, the Tribes submit that the IBMP has been successful in fulfilling its twin goals of increased bison tolerance in Montana and maintenance of the state's brucellosis-free status. Undoubtedly bison management is a complex issue, but it is important to note that there has never been a documented bison-to-cattle transmission of brucellosis while the IBMP has been in place. Moreover, as long as the elk population of the Greater Yellowstone Area carries the disease brucellosis will remain that environment. With the recent modifications to federal regulations, the threat of Montana losing its brucellosis-free status has been greatly reduced.

The Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes are prepared to continue our treaty hunt, as well as our good working relationship with the Montana, and hope to continue co-managing this public resource for the good of both tribal and state citizens. The Tribes respectfully urge this committee to vote NO on Senate Bill 143.

Sincerely,
