Montana Centers for Independent Living are non-residential, consumer-controlled, community-based, private, non-profit organizations that provide individual and systems advocacy services by and for persons with all types of disabilities.

Montana Centers for Independent Living work with individuals with disabilities and their families to obtain the services they need to preserve their right to choose, to live, and to fully and equally participate in society.

Montana Centers for Independent Living serve as a strong voice on a wide range of national, state and local issues and work to assure physical, attitudinal, and programmatic access to housing, employment, transportation, communities, recreation, and health and social services.

Independent Living

Independent Living is a philosophy and a movement of people who work to achieve the right of self-determination, equal opportunity and self-respect for all people with disabilities.

Independent Living means being in control of our own lives, taking responsibility for our own actions, being able to take risks, and having the right to either fail or succeed on our own terms. It means participating in community life and pursuing activities based entirely upon self-determined interests and preferences.

All people, including people with disabilities, want to grow up and live with our own families, go to our neighborhood schools, use the same busses as our neighbors, work in jobs that are in line with our education and interests while being fairly and competitively compensated, and be able to start and raise our own families.
