WHEREAS, Montana owes its creation in large part to the undaunted efforts of Sidney Edgerton, a self-made man who rose from hardship to being appointed Chief Justice of the Idaho Territory by President Abraham Lincoln in 1863; and

WHEREAS, at the request of Bannack City citizens, Chief Justice Edgerton bravely defied highway robbers, such as the Plummer Gang, and traveled from Bannack City to Washington, D.C., with thousands of dollars' worth of gold nuggets sewn into his overcoat so that he could demonstrate the importance of establishing a new territory; and

WHEREAS, in Washington, D.C., his efforts, along with other prominent leaders from the territory, were instrumental in persuading Congress to pass the act that established the Montana Territory on May 26, 1864, and in establishing Montana's boundaries so that they encompassed the Bitterroot Mountains, the Flathead Valley, and Butte and the surrounding area; and

WHEREAS, President Lincoln appointed Sidney Edgerton as the first territorial governor of Montana and he served in the post without a territorial secretary or federal financing; and

WHEREAS, Sidney Edgerton financed and kept Montana's territorial government running by spending a considerable sum of money out of his own pocket to pay the government's expenses; and

WHEREAS, Sidney Edgerton was an outspoken critic of slavery and a staunch abolitionist, which was not a popular position with some of those elected to the first Montana Territorial Legislature; and

WHEREAS, the 1867 Territorial Legislature renamed Edgerton County as Lewis and Clark County; and

WHEREAS, because of political contention during and after the Civil War, Sidney Edgerton's place in history was never fully recognized so that now he has been referred to as "the forgotten man who gave Montana its shape"; and

WHEREAS, Montana owes a debt of gratitude to Governor Edgerton for using his own money in establishing Montana; and

WHEREAS, it is fitting that Sidney Edgerton's significant contributions toward establishing this great state of Montana be duly recognized.
