Background Materials and Research

Topic Summary: It is the policy of Montana to control the manufacture, sale, importation, and distribution of alcoholic beverages. The Montana Alcoholic Beverage Code thus establishes three separate entities to effectuate this goal. This is commonly referred to as the three-legged stool to alcohol regulation: manufacture, sale, and distribution. Prior to 1999, breweries were generally prohibited from selling alcohol. In 1999, the Legislature allowed small breweries to provide up to 48 ounces of samples in a room located on premises. The 1999 law defined small brewery as a brewery producing less than 10,000 barrels. The definition of small brewery was expanded to a maximum of 60,000 barrels in 2017.
