Background Materials and Research

Topic Summary: In 1973, the Montana legislature handed over control of subdivision development to local governments in legislation known as the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act, found in Title 76, Chapter 3, MCA. The act intends to prevent overcrowding, promote public health, safety, and general welfare, consolidate development to ensure services and minimize public utility costs, and maintain harmony with the natural environment, among other purposes. The act defines subdivisions as parcels containing less than 160 acres, including contiguous or noncontiguous parcels (76-3-104, MCA). Local governments may adopt their own subdivision regulations, granted they meet the minimum requirements set forth in the act.

Minimum requirements include:

- materials needed for application
- procedure for submission and review of application
- identification of unsuitable areas for subdivision
- set standards for roads, lots, streets, grading and drainage, water supply, sewage and solid waste disposal, public utilities, parks, water rights, ditch easements, etc.
- process for holding public hearings
- defined evasion criteria for exemptions
- defined criteria for RV and mobile home site reviews

Certain areas may claim exemption, such as airports, cemetery lots, leased or rented land used for agriculture, land used for public rights of way and utilities, and land not under state jurisdiction. Local governments are given authority to examine proposed exemptions for attempted evasions while also maintaining authority to enforce punishment for violations. Violating the act constitutes a misdemeanor offense, punishable of a fine not less than $100 or more than $500 or imprisonment in a county jail for no more than 3 months, or both (76-3-105, MCA).
